THE SUMERIAN VERB na de₅(-g) "TO CLEAR"*

WALTHER SALLABERGER
Ludwigs-Maximilians-Universität, München

THE FOLLOWING DISCUSSION of the Sumerian verb na de₅ takes its departure from the results of the careful analysis offered by the jubilarian more than twenty years ago in his well-known article dealing with "Some Rare Sumerian Words Gleaned from the Royal Hymns of Sulgi."¹ May he accept it as a small tribute of just one student who has learned so much of third millennium Sumerian from his writings.

In the mentioned article, Jacob Klein describes the situation as follows: "the compound na-RI(-g) appears as the root of three Sumerian verbs, with entirely different meanings, and practically unknown etymologies:

1. na-RI(-g) I 'to give instructions' (Akk. ašārum)
2. na-RI(-g) II 'to purify, cleanse' (Akk. elēlum)
3. na-RI(-g) III 'to perish, fall/fell.'"

This description corresponds very well with the attested contexts: na de₅ I (for the reading see below) most often occurs in the context of verbal

* This study grew out of my current work on a Sumerian glossary, which is prepared in cooperation with Pascal Attinger, Berne. Pascal Attinger provided me with his data base of literary texts, which was of invaluable help in collecting references. I am obliged to Bram Jagersma and Remco de Maaijer for their transliterations of Sumerian administrative texts, to Bram Jagersma also for his information on his current work on a Sumerian grammar of the third millennium. Furthermore, this study has been greatly facilitated by the data provided via Internet by Steve Tinney (Index to Sumerian Secondary Literature) and Jeremy A. Black et al. (Electronic Text Corpus of Sumerian Literature). Gratefully I acknowledge the advice I have received from Pascal Attinger after his critical reading of the text and from Karen Radner, who saved me from terrible mistakes of expression. However, for those remaining no one else than the author has to be blamed.

1. J. Klein, "Some Rare Sumerian Words Gleaned from the Royal Hymns of Šulgi," in: G. B. Sarfatti et al. (eds.), Studies in Hebrew and Semitic Languages Dedicated to the Memory of Prof. Eduard Yechezkel Kutscher (Ramat-Gan 1980), IX–XXVIII.
instructions; na de₂₅ II is most prominent in incantations; and na de₂₅ III is apparently restricted to Old Sumerian administrative texts from Girsu. The relatively limited specific contexts in which the verb na RI is met explain well the two different Akkadian translations.

The solution offered by Klein has been generally accepted.² My considerations start from the question as to how three (or four) homophone verbs might have come into existence. Given the constant orthography, the ending -g and the exclusivity of a nominal element na in a compound verb, there is no need to propose two (or three) homographic verbs of different spellings. The combination of a rare nominal element na and the not too frequent verb de₂₅(-g) also speaks against two ‘real’ homonyms of different etymological background. Thus, one would have to assume polysemy, three or even four (see below) specific meanings derived from a common basic meaning.

This article is devoted to the detection of such a basic or original meaning. The basic meaning often leads to a better understanding of the grammatical construction of a verb, although this does not apply to our case. More importantly, the awareness of the basic meaning contributes essentially to the specific meaning. Even if we would not change our translation of, e.g., na de₂₅ I “to give instructions” in the formulaic expression na ga(e)-de₂₅ na-de₂₅-ğu₁₀ ḫe₂₂-dāb₂ “I will instruct you; may my instruction be accepted by you” (see (9) below), knowledge about the second meaning “to cleanse” of the same verb enhances the understanding of the respective phrase and its context. In this way, we are starting to reconstruct the semantic range of the Sumerian verb, and we are not dealing any more with the semantic ranges of translations, be it Akkadian (ašārum) or any standard modern European language (“to give instructions,” “unterweisen”).

On the other hand, the whole scope of Akkadian translations helps to define the semantics of a word. The catalogue of Akkadian translations of a Sumerian word resembles very much the look in any modern dictionary, besides the facts that (1) Akkadian translations have been collected and are preserved haphazardly without the systematic treatment of a dictionary, and that (2) all translations are practically deprived of their (idiomatic, pragmatic, social) context. To illustrate this point, I quote from a medium-sized English-German dictionary (Langenscheidts Großes Schulwörterbuch), a selection of the translations given for the transitive verb “to clear” (meanings 13.–25. of the entry “clear”): “13. a[ls]o ~ up (auf)klären, erläutern; 14. säubern, reinigen (a[ls]o fig[uratively]), befreien; losmachen (of von): to ~ the street of snow die Straße von Schnee reinigen; 15. Saal etc. räumen, leeren;

THE SUMERIAN VERB na de₃(-g)

Waren(lager) räumen [...]; Tisch abräumen, abdecken; Straße freimachen; Land, Wald roden: to ~ the way Platz machen, den Weg bahnen; to ~ out of the way fig. beseitigen; 16. reinigen, säubern [...]; 17. frei-, lossprechen [...]. [...]

Gewinn erzielen, einheimsen: to ~ expenses die Unkosten einbringen; 21. nautical term a) Schiff klarmachen (for action zum Gefecht), b) Schiff aussklarieren, c) Ladung löschen, d) Hafen verlassen, ...." The equation na de₃ = "to clear" given as title of this contribution has thus lost its clarity and a more exact description of the meaning has to be supplied.

Our general considerations have lead us to the conclusion that na de₃(-g) I-III should be taken as specific meanings of one verb deduced from a hitherto unknown basic meaning. The detection of this basic meaning poses a problem since semantic shifts do not follow predictable patterns. Thus our reconstruction has to start with an in-depth study of the various specific meanings.

Reading of na de₃(-g), Verbal Class

The major sources for the reading and meaning of the verb na de₃ have been collected by Jacob Klein in his article, which forms the point of departure for our investigation. Some of these sources have received further elaboration, others have been published since then. Hence, for the convenience of the reader an updated list of the most important sources is presented here.

The reading of the verbal base RI-g as de₃-g containing the so-called "d₁-phoneme" (ᵣ) seems to be generally accepted nowadays.³

The prime source for this reading is:

(1) Proto-Ea 130 (MSL 14, 36): de-e (4x), di-i (2x), de₃-e (1x) RI

This reading of na de₃-g is corroborated by unorthographic variants and glosses (cf. below (14) for lexical lists):

(2) Gudea Cyl. B vi 14: na-de₃(DU) šum₂ (// na-de₃(RI) šum₂ Cyl. B xii 9)⁴

The reading of de₃ instead of ri (thereby avoiding a transliteration Ŧᵣ) conforms to du₃ (i.e., Ŧᵣ₃). Apart from the seminal article of J. Bauer, "Zum /dr/-Phonem des Sumerischen," WO 8 (1975-76): 1-9 (there p. 3 n.15 on na de₃), cf., e.g., S. Lieberman, SLOB I: 441 No. 561; J. Krecher, WO 4 (1968): 266; Sjöberg, ZA 59 (1969): 17-18 (temple name e₂-rab-di₃-di₃ written also e₂-rab-di₃-di₄); C. Wilcke, ZA 68 (1978): 212 n.11; cf. also Klein, as note 1: XXI n. 49-50 (ad na-RI), and the literature cited by K. Volk, Inanna and Šukaletuda (Wiesbaden, 1995), 168 with n. 784. The so-called /dr/-phoneme and its loss in the Old Babylonian period is discussed by Bram Jagersma in an article in press in a volume on diachronic and synchronic variations of Sumerian, edited by J. Black and G. Zólyomi as ASJ 22 ("2000").

On the interchange of de₃(RI) and de₃(DU) in Ur III texts, cf. C. Wilcke, "Flurschäden [...]" in: H. Klengel and J. Renger (eds.), Landwirtschaft im Alten Orient.

"On that day, the splendid girl, — her mother is enlightening her, Ninlîl, — Nunbaršegunu is enlightening her."

Among the commentaries to this line see especially R.D. Biggs and M. Civil, RA 60 (1966): 2 with note 5; H. Behrens, Enlîl and Ninlîl, StP s.m. 8 (Rome, 1978), 76-77; on the translation J.S. Cooper, JCS 32 (1980): 177-78; Schretter, Emesal-Studien, 251, # 416a. ša - de/., all with further literature.

(6) Further examples:

a) Inanna and the numun-plant I. 1; S.N. Kramer, Studies C. Gordon (New York, 1980), 91:1: ab-ba na mu-un-de "the old man is instructed (i.e., he knows)." Kramer, loc. cit., 95, explains na de as writing of na de5; for the verbal form see (23) below.

b) VS 10, 123 iv 10: ša₂₃ na-ma-an-di-di // ša₂₃ na-ma-an-de₅-de₅ ibid. iv 6; see Alster, Instructions 125 and Schretter loc. cit.

The vowel of the verbal base is /e/ according to Proto-Ea, whereas the Old Sumerian prefix chains⁵ i₃-di₅, b₂-di₅, i₃-mi-di₅ demand /i/ (thus di₅); the only exceptions are e-me-de₅ (DP 428) and be₂-de₅ (DP 429).

The verb belongs to the "Reduplication class," ḫamitu stem de₅-g (e.g., na de₅-ga), marû stem de₅-de₅ (vocalic ending): cf. (5) and Instructions of Šuruppak 6, (21) dumu-ni-ra na na-mu-un-de₅-de₅ "he is informing his son," both introducing direct speech and thus demanding present-future tense.⁶

According to references (5) and (6b), the Emesal form of na de₅ is ša di (or de). Furthermore, the form ša re/i-b is attested in unorthographic Sumerian texts (7a) and probably in the Emesal vocabulary (7).

(7) Emesal voc. III 105 (MSL 4, 36 + CT 19, 35) še re₂-[ba] = [na de₅-ga]

= a-ši-ir-tum; see Klein, as n.1: XXI n. 49; Schretter, Emesal-Studien, 256 no. 440 še su₆-[ba] with further literature, no further improvement given by R. Borger, in: M. Dietrich and O. Loretz (eds.), Dubsar antament (= Studies Römer), AOAT 253 (Münster, 1998): 33 ("Rs. I 11").

(7a) A. Cavigneaux, ZA 85 (1995): 40, lists the following Emesal references of a phrase similar to (3):

šu-um-du-um ša₂₃ ri-ba-še₃ (JCS 29, 9:9') šu-um-du-um ša ri-ba (VS 2, 4 vi 5)
šu-um-du-um ša₂₃ ri-ba (CT 42, 22 iv 7 and vi 19; RA 15, 128 obv. 21)

The alternations main dialect na : Emesal ša (instead the single še of (7)) and Ceg : Ceb (C = consonant) correspond to the expected forms (cf. Schretter, Emesal-Studien, 68 and 50). Here, the /dr/-phoneme has developed to /r/ as in the "Southern" Sumerian dialect of the late third millennium (see Jagersma, note 4).

6. The entry "ri" in the glossary of M.-L. Thomsen, The Sumerian Language (Copenhagen 1984), 312, is a mix-up of the verbs ri (variant ru, vocalic ending) "to direct towards" and de₅-g "to collect" (on the latter see below, p. 250). This confusion is not rare in the Sumerological literature. Unexpected is na mu-ni-ib-de₅-ge in EnlSud 77 according to M. Civil's transliteration in JOS 103 (1983): 54; the only published source K (SLFN 2) reads na mu-ni-ib-de₅ (Nanibgal is the agent!).
Akkadian Translations

1. ašāru: a. I etwa "ordnend überwachen; betreuen" (AHw, 79) = "to muster, review" (Black et al., CDA s.v.), a. A "to muster, organize, marshal (forces), to provide with food rations, to check, control, instruct" (CAD A/2, 420).

For bilingual attestations see already (5) above, as well as the following references for na-de₅ = aširtu (7, 8), ašīru (9, 10):

(12) MEE 4, 300 VE 901: na-de₅ = wa-ša-lu-um, wa-ša(‘L)-lu-um.

On the interpretation of the Eblaite translation as ašārum, see G. Conti, in: P. Fronzaroli (ed.), Miscellanea Eblaitica, 1, QuSem. 15 (Firenze, 1988), 53. Conti interpretes VE 899 na-du₃ = maš-ar-tum/dù-um as a variant of the same verb, accepted by Selz, ASJ 17 (1995): 256 n.18. However, Conti fails to explain the metathesis of the first two radicals

7. This routine formula of literary texts has been treated by Attinger, Eléments, 236 (with more references); he discusses the reading of the second verb ḫe₂-(e)-dab₅ as dab₅ ("puisse mon conseil 'prendre à toi'") or tuš ("s'installer/prendre place sur toi"). The choice of the reading dab₅ is admittedly conditioned by the Akkadian translation in (9); I understand the 2nd person prefix -e- as ergative (thus allowing a modal verbal form ḫe₂ + preterite), lit. "you should have accepted."
(maš'artum vs. *maš'artum), and thus this entry of VE is not considered here.

Finally, the confusing translations of the Nergal song 4 R 30 no.1 20ff. should be cited in this context. As J.S. Cooper has made clear (JCS 32 [1980]: 177–78), there is no direct correspondence between Sumerian and Akkadian text. The text is cited from his edition:

(13) 4 R 30 no. 1 20ff. = JCS 32, 178:

(2) dim₃-me-er na-aḡ₂-KU na-de₅-de₅-ge-eš : na-aḡ₂-gel-le- eḡ₂-ḡa₂
ili ina šahluquṭi tal-qu₂!(LU)-ut : talqut : tušamqit

(3) dim₃-me-er an-na mu-un-su₈-su₈-ge-eš : me₃ su₈-su₈-ge-eš : mu-e-ši-sig-ge-eš
ili ša šamē tāšur : ana tāḥazi izzazzūka

In (2) de₅ is translated by laqāṭu and šumqutu; ašāru in (3) apparently corresponds to de₅ in (2), misunderstanding the form as na de₅.

Sign lists cite the meaning of compound verbs under the simple verbal base. Thus, the translation of na de₅ may also be found with simple de₅(RI) = laqāṭu etc., also maqāṭu (see below, p. 250):

(14) Proto-Aa 130:2: [de]-e RI wa-ša-[ru-um],

8. The text has been cited often in discussions of na de₅. A first edition is the one of J. Böllenhücher, Gebete und Hymnen an Nergal, LSS I/6 (Leipzig 1904), 42–55, text no. 7.
Akkadian verb as wašarum instead of ašārum. The verb wašarum is understood as “to sink down” (CDA; AHw, 1484 “sich senken”), “to be humble” (CAD A/2, 422 ašārum B), better known is the adjective wašrum “humble.” J.-M. Durand, LAPO 16, 106, offers another solution for the problem posed by (10). He proposes a verb wašārum, which apparently corresponds semantically more or less to ašārum; wašrum is explained as a verbal adjective (“brought in order” = “humble”).

The Akkadian dictionaries also list other Sumerian equivalents of ašāru:

- sağ en₃ tar (also = šalu, paqadu) (Kagal B 303–4; bilingual TCL 6 51:33ff.), also cited under tar (A III/5:139)
- i, i-i (Izi I 10a–11, MSL 13, 160)
- umun₂ AK (BWL 244 r. iv 25)
- lu₂ igi-du₈ AK-a aširu, sağ en₃ tar paqidu Erimḫuš V 146–47 (MSL 17, 73)

igi kar₂-kar₂ // tāšertum (Old Babylonian) “control, checking”

Taken together, these translations make clear that na de₅ // ašāru is semantically closer to sağ en₃ tar paqadu “to care for, to instruct” (note also igi kar₂) than, e.g., to a₂ g₂₂-ğ₂₂ (w)u‘urum “to give an order,” ad ge₄ malakû “to give advice,” zu edû (S) “to (let) know.”

2. elēlu D “to purify” and ellu “pure,” tēliltu “purification”; see the dictionaries for references.

Other Sumerian verbs translated with elēlu, ellu are first of all ku₃ and sikil, furthermore, e.g., gub₂, dalla, gerin, za-gin₃, tam. Here, the distribution of Akkadian translations does not help to pinpoint the meaning more precisely, but we have to evaluate the contexts (see below).

3. The last two references from lexical lists, (16) and (17), remain unexplained:

| udu de₅- ’de₅-ga¹ | miqittu |
| udu de₅-de₅ | ṣuparruru |
| udu na de₅-ga | MIN ḫḫ XIII 30–32 (MSL 8/1, 9)⁹ |

The restorations are suggested by Nippur Forerunner 19–20 (MSL 8/1, 83), now attested also at Emar 6/4, 550: 21′–22′: udu de₅-de₅-ga, udu na de₅-ga.

Whereas de₅-de₅-ga miqittu “downfall, dead animals” is well known (see below p. 250), ṣuparruru “outspread” is only here connected with sheep.

4. On the term for libanomancy

My discussion of the Akkadian translations closes with a note on niği₂-na de₇-ga qutrēnu "incense." J. Klein's study of na de₅ started from the occurrence of "niği₂(-)na(-)de₅-ga" in Šulgi C 102, Šulgi claiming knowledge of all kinds of divination including libanomancy (Klein, as note 1, XV). As a semantic link with na de₅ is difficult to establish (see below), I would prefer the first solution offered by Klein loc. cit., XVI-XVII, namely to divide niği₂-na de₅-ga; the relevant passage would perhaps read niği₂-na de₅-ga IGIP1/x-re⁷ "to inspect" the heaped up (lit. "collected")Ⅱ censer" (instead of niği₂ na de₅-ga, lit. "the consecrated thing"). 12 This, however, must remain uncertain.

Verbal Forms of na de₅ in Literary Texts

The following selection of finite verbal forms should allow a quick check of the construction of the verb na de₅. The construction of the compound verb conforms with the expected patterns, thus the case of the oblique object 13 or the form na-še₃ if the contents of the "instruction" are mentioned before (construction like, e.g., NAME mu-še₃ še₂₁, GIFT saqš-še₃ rig₇). References not belonging to the Old Babylonian period are indicated as such.

The infinite verb in Šulgi C 102 is transliterated by Klein as SIG₅-re, for which he proposes a reading kur-ra / re šarāpu "to burn" (i.e., gurum₃ AK-a "to refine" silver, Nabnitu XXIII 128, MSL. 16, 215). Cavigneaux, ZA 85 (1995): 43 n. 20, see (3), reads Šulgi C 102 igi wa / bar₅(UD)-re.

(25) d-a-nun-na-ke₄-ne na ba-an-de₅-ge-eš-am₃ "the Anuna were giving instructions" Nippur Lament 19.

¹⁴ The variants and deviating verbal forms of the Instructions of Šuruppak are not listed here.

¹⁵ M. Civil translates the phrase as "Old-Man-Tiller instructed his son"; The Farmer's Instructions, AuOr Suppl. 5 (Sabadell, 1994), 29; he justifies the translation "Old-Man-Tiller" in his commentary on p. 67. According to the matrix on p. 207, all preserved sources (D, E in full; A, B, C partly) show dumu-ni (no dative!) na mu-un-de₅-ga-am₃, as do the non-Nippur texts D₃ (p. 50), G₃ (from Babylon; p. 65); this can be translated only as "his son is instructed" (note the different construction in (21)). Civil's translation is apparently influenced by the two texts from Ur, A₂ and A₃, who read u₄-ul uru₄-e. The Nippur texts show either u₄-ul uru₄-ra (B, D) or engar-ra (hardly uru₄-ra = /ura/) (A, also non-Nippur D₃), which I take as anticipatory genitive. The person "instructed" is thus a descendant (dumu) of generations of farmers; the ultimate instructor is the divine farmer Ninurta, as said at the end of the poem.
"To Purify, to Consecrate" and "to Instruct" — One Verb or Two?

In incantations, na de₅(-ga) is translated as ullulu "to purify," ellu "pure," tēlītu "purification" (see Klein, as note 1, esp. XVIII-XX with n. 41-45). As incantations are mostly intended to obtain purity, words for "pure" or "to purify" are especially frequent there, above all ku₃, sikil, or dadag; gub₂ is practically restricted to a gub₂-ba "holy water." The purification of the patient is expressed by the verbs ku₃, sikil, or dadag, whereas na de₅ is almost never used in this context (an exception is CT 17, 22:136, see (20)).

Mostly, na de₅ occurs as the verb of a primary "purification" or "consecration" of the materia magica like water (26), (27), (28) cedar, (29) juniper, (30) willow (stick) (29), reed, (31) incense, (32) evil-butting goat (4), — or even the incantation priest himself (30). Sometimes, Enki is named as the agent of this consecration, which gives the respective substances their essential quality and thus enables them to act as purifiers. The act of "consecration" is achieved through the words of Enki; (27), (28), cf. (3) and (7a). Whereas all other examples stem from Neo-Sumerian (see note 19), Old Babylonian or later incantations, (31) attests this use of na de₅ in Ur III economic documents and (32) in Gudea. Here, the procession boat (31) and the new temple (32) are "consecrated."

16. In CT 16, 21: 207, Udughul T. 16, na de₅ qualifies the holy water in the Sumerian text, whereas the object of ullulu is the patient in Akkadian: a gub₂-ba a ku₃-ga na de₅-ga-an₃ : MIN mē ellāti ullīlu-ma.

Most Sumerian equivalents of ellu "clean, pure" contain semantic nuances that are not found with na de₅-ga, namely the concepts of light, brightness and brilliance (cf. ḥadag, ḥalla, ku₃), of being untouched (cf. 22. A parallel is the chant concerning holy water, Reiner, Šurpu, Appendix p. 52f.: (6–7) a engur¹-ra mi₂ zi-de₃-eš du₁₁-[ga] // mā ša ina apsi kīni šunnu (8–9) ka ku₃ d'en-ki-ke₄ na de₅-ga-am₃ // pi ellen ša Eā ullūšumūti "water, treated with care in the deep water, purified by the pure mouth of Enki."

sikil?). Furthermore, na de₅ does not refer to a purification through washing or cleaning (cf. 1ulu),²⁵ but na de₅ seems to indicate that the purity is achieved by putting an object in order so that its clarified essence emerges. This result now allows a semantic connection between the two specific meanings “to purify, to consecrate” (ullulu) and “to instruct” (asaru), namely “to put in order, to clarify.”

A. Cavigneaux, ZA 85 (1995): 41, has reached a similar conclusion, although he did not consider the semantic field of “to purify” explicitly:

“Si on essaie, indépendamment des traductions akkadiennes, de trouver un sens [de na de₅ - W.S.] qui convienne aux textes exorcistiques, on pour-rait penser à «faire (ou «prononcer» ou «certifier» selon que c’est un _verbum faciendi_ ou _dicendi_ idoine, arranger, rendre efficace, valider (pur le rituel»); [...] «consacrer» est un compromis qui tient compte de l’usage exorcistique du mot mais ignore sa parenté avec le mot na-ri(g) «exercer une activité organisatrice, donner la norme [...]», donner des instructions [...] et «contrôler, vérifier, certifier» tiré de l’équivalence avec l’akkadien _ašaru_.”

The specific meaning “to instruct” of na de₅ gave its title to the Instructions of Šuruppag and to the Farmer’s Instructions. Now, after the discussion of the verb in incantations, a translation “to clarify, enlighten” offers itself; the Instructions are proverbs explaining the world. In the Nippur Lament, (25), “to give instructions” is parallel to just decisions in the next phrase; in Lugalbanda II 4, the “advice, instruction” of the mother (22) is followed by the father “speaking words” (enim du₁₁).

As god giving “instruction” to the country most often Enlil’s vizier Nuska²⁶ is praised, but also Ninurta,²⁷ Ningirsu’s son Igalim,²₈ and his herald Dimgal-abzu,²₉ or Ningēšzida, Ninsianna, and Ninegal of Ur in inscriptions of Rim-Suen,\textsuperscript{30} but in Mari the "Syrian Enlil" Dagan, (10), later also Marduk, (11): furthermore—again in Old Babylonian—establishments as the prison (Nungal 32), the palace (Iddin-Dagan A 167) or the school of Nippur (Enlibani A 180–81).

These references allow a further precision of na\textsubscript{de}_{25}. In Old Babylonian texts from Babylonia, the "instruction, clarification" is not given by Enlil or any divine ruler, but by their viziers and heralds, thus it does not carry the meaning of "command, order" (like, e.g., a\textsubscript{2} a\textsubscript{g}2). Furthermore, na\textsubscript{de}_{25} implies to put one object in order, in its proper form and function, not to organize various single items (cf. si sa\textsubscript{2}).\textsuperscript{31} Although na\textsubscript{de}_{25} can be used as a \textit{verbum dicendi}, it is not primarily a verb expressing a manner of speaking, as the references given and the Akkadian translations testify.

\textit{Old Sumerian Administrative Texts}

In Old Sumerian administrative texts, na\textsubscript{de}_{25}/di\textsubscript{5} (on the form, see above)\textsuperscript{32} occurs with two groups of objects, trees/wooden objects and animals, traditionally translated as "to fell" and "to fall" (see below), a meaning derived from the context. The following discussion is intended to examine some presuppositions of such context-based translations.

The selected references are meant to provide a list of all attested verbal forms of na\textsubscript{de}_{25} together with an overview of the contexts. The central passages of the documents are transliterated, lists of items are not repeated here, names not relevant for the discussion are abbreviated (GN = geographical name, MN = month name, PN = personal name); dates according to years of L = Lugalanda and U = Urukagina, Ue = ensi\textsubscript{2}-year.

The translations offered anticipate the following discussion.

The basic facts can be summarized as follows:

- the animals listed are mostly udu siki “wool-bearing sheep,” but exceptionally also donkeys, (36), and cows (34), (35);
- the items delivered are the hides (kuš), see (33), (36), (41); therefore the description of the sheep’s hide is essential, udu siki or udu siki ur₄-ra in (41);
- the animals die under the charge of their respective herdsmen (and not, e.g., in an institutional kitchen or at offerings);
- the hides are delivered to the palace of the ruler or to his wife’s estate as the ultimate owners of the animals (šu-a gi₄); in its stead a sum of silver can be paid as compensation, (34); if not delivered to the palace, the accounts can not (yet) be settled, (35).

The basic facts can be summarized as follows:

– the items listed are wooden objects or, in the case of tamarisk, sticks of fixed length;
– the process of na de₅ is part of the felling of the trees or at least the use of their wood, it takes place in the forests or gardens, cf. ki mu₂-a (46), (47), occasionally the area treated is indicated, (44), (48);
– gardeners or foresters take care of the gardens, forests or riverine thickets, (45), 36 assigned to them by the central institution apparent in these texts, the household of the ruler’s wife (e₂-mi₂); the central authorities control the exploitation of these forests for wood;

- the wooden objects are left in the wood, (44), heaped up in piles, kuru₁₃, cf. (46), brought to storehouses, (43), cf. (49), or to the palace (50), or put on ship for transport to the palace (46);

- mostly the chief supervisor of Paranamtara’s and Sasa’s household, Eniggal, is performing the task, but occasionally other persons are named: Enṣu(gigi) (50), the ruler Lugalanda (51), the temple administrator, (52), or various persons, (47).

A Critical Review of Proposed Meanings
(a) “to fall, to fell” and the construction of na de₅

The conventional translation of na de₅ in Old Sumerian administrative texts is “to fall, to fell,” a meaning derived from the interpretation of the contexts. In this case, “to fall” (said of animals) is a construction with one “real” participant outside the compound verb, i.e., a transitive verb, whereas “to fell” (said of trees) requires two such participants. A short review of the verbal forms proves this assumption to be unlikely. With animals we find mostly PN-da na ba-da-di₅ (ba=n+da=b(+i)=di₅), or only na ba-di₅ (ba=b(+i)=di₅) in (33) and (35), in (39) plus ventive na e-ma-di₅ (i=m=ba=b(+i)=di₅), thus a “passive” form, “it was ...ed (at PN).” Applying the meaning “to fall, fell,” this results in a translation “it (i.e. the animal) was felled.”

37. Bauer, AWL 256 ad no. 73 vi 7; p. 310 ad no. 104 ii 2, basing himself on Deimel, Or SP 16 (1925), 61–63, who p. 62 offered the strange etymology of na explained as “phonetic” spelling of na₂ (i.e., nu₂), and ri(g) = legū, thus arriving at a meaning “niederreißen, fallen” (apparently from a literal translation “to take (to) lying”; A. Poebel, AS 2 (1931), 38: “to take out, to remove”; further translations of H. de Genouillac, TSA (1908), 78 no. 26 r.iv 9 “(faire) préparer,” R. Scholtz, MVAeG 39/2 (1934), 128f. “zurichten (Hölzer),” M. Lambert, RA 51 (1957): 141–43 “dépouiller” are listed by Steiner, BBVO 18 (1999): 121 n. 44. Despite their vagueness (“to prepare” of de Genouillac and Scholtz), these proposals are very close to our own.

38. The objects listed in the beginning of a document are not marked by case; on the syntactical structure of administrative texts see Sallaberger, “Textformular und Syntax in sumerischen Verwaltungstexten,” ASJ 22 (in press).

39. The combination of pronominal and dimensional element in the prefix chain (prefixes II according to the terminology of Attinger) is marked as, e.g., n+i (3. pers. + directive); b(+i) is the allomorph /b/ of /b+i/ in the position directly before the base according to the terminology of Wilcke and Attinger; according to Krecher “hinteres Personalpräfix.”

40. I owe the designation and explanation of the ba-prefix as “medium marker” to Bram Jagersma (see note * above); see Attinger, Eléments, § 181 on the formal side, § 182 d) (with further cross references; also NABU 1998/41) on this function of ba-.
The wood texts usually show the causative construction of compound verbs: PN-e na bi₂-di₅ (b+i=n=di₅) "PN ...ed it"; with ventive i₃-mi-di₅ (i=m=b+i=n=di₅) "he ...ed it hither"; (51) with "medium" and ventive na e-ma-di₅ (i=m=ba=n=di₅) "he ...ed it hither for himself"; or with a locative na ba-ni-di₅ (ba=ni=n=di₅) "he ...ed it for himself there." Especially interesting is the simple transitive construction in (41), na i₃-di₅ (i=b=di₅), "it ...ed" (with "to fall, fell": "it fell"). Even if we allow idiomatic peculiarities that can hardly be represented in our translation, with na de₅ meaning "to fall, fell" we would have expected just the opposite distribution of na ba-di₅ (animals) and na i₃-di₅ (wood). Admittedly, this distribution alone is hardly sufficient to reject the conventional translation.

(b) An administrative term "to order" or "to free from obligations"?

The translation "to fall, fell" for na de₅ presents further difficulties, because:

- it does not offer any semantic link with the meanings "to purify" and "to instruct" or their common meaning "to clarify, clear, enlighten"
- it is not corroborated by an Akkadian translation (see above)
- other words for "fall, fell" are well known (e.g., šub, sag₃ "to fell")
- in Old Babylonian Nippur, animals qualified as na de₅-ga receive fodder (see below)

I am aware of two substantiated proposals linking Old Sumerian na de₅ with the known Akkadian translations. Furthermore, both proposals try to give a single translation for both trees and animals.

(1) G. Steiner rejects the translation "to fell" of the wood texts because (a) "to cut, fell trees" is expressed by kus and sag₃ and (b) because it would make little sense in the Reforms of Urukagina (52) to fell the tree in order to get the fruit. This is indeed unlikely, but the text lists only two forms of usufruct of trees or bushes, namely to harvest them for wood or for fruit. Steiner departs from the Akkadian translation asārum (see above) and proposes "(zur Lieferung) anweisen, (in) Auftrag geben (o.ä.)" (p. 122).

(2) J. Krecher's argumentation is very close to the one of Steiner, but he chose the other Akkadian equivalent, ullulu: "Ich vermute, dass bei na

42. Or 54 (1985): 170 note 73.
i-mi-RI usw. die Bedeutung ‘reinigen’ vorliegt, nicht ein spezifischer konkreter Vorgang (’to cut’, M. Yoshikawa, Or 47, 477), sondern ein allgemeiner Verwaltungsvorgang, denn er bezieht sich nicht nur auf Holz, sondern auch auf Tiere und Häute [...] na-RI meint demnach vielleicht ‘bindende Belastungen beseitigen’, daher ‘nach Feststellung der qualitativen und quantitativen Merkmale zur Verwendung freigeben’.

Unfortunately, both proposals cannot stand a careful test. For reasons of methodology, more than one counter-argument is listed; semantic arguments are not adduced.

- Old Sumerian administrative documents list many more objects to be “ordered” or “released,” so why should it just occur with hides or wooden objects?
- If the “order” or “release” is important enough to be written down in a text, why is it always expressed without an agent in the animal texts?
- Why should just the animals providing hides be “ordered”/“released,” but not those “consumed” (gu₇)?
- If both hides and wooden objects are ordered/released, why do the texts use different verbal forms (see above)?
- On the level of content, how should we explain the resulting different role of Eniggal in the animal texts (never “giving order”/“releasing”) and in the wood texts (most often “giving order”/“releasing”)?

Both Steiner and Krecher propose to understand na de₅ as an administrative term instead of a more or less concrete action. Compared to other archives of administrative texts, this looks reasonable. The Old Sumerian texts from the e₂-m₁₂, however, are characterized by their exceedingly rich verbal vocabulary, and concrete actions are not rare among these; the first official Eniggal is, e.g., “excavating onions” (ba-al, e.g., VS 14, 6 = AWL no. 187) or “pouring in” cream and milk (de₂, e.g., DP 276).

This discussion has thus cleared the way to look for a meaning of na de₅ in Old Sumerian administrative texts that would fit both to grammar and context and to the semantics of na de₅ as known from lexical and literary texts.

na de₅ with Animals: “to Clear Out/Away, Separate,” and Notes on šu-a gi₄ “to Refund, to Enter on Someone’s Credit” and de₅-g “to Collect, Pick Up”

The investigation of the proposals of Krecher and Steiner has revealed the problems of understanding na de₅ as administrative procedure. This would point to a concrete action, to be performed with (dead) animals and applied to trees in their forests in order to obtain wooden objects.
Furthermore, the animal texts typically include an administrative term that notes the economic-administrative side of the transaction, namely $\text{su-a gi}_4$; see (34)-(41) above. If the meaning of $\text{su-a gi}_4$, literally “to return on/in/to hand,” is reduced to “to deliver,” as it is often the case, it loses the precise meaning “to return to the charge/control/care,” i.e., to settle the account. A shepherd delivering a hide of a dead sheep thus compensates his debt to return the sheep, which is ultimately owned by the central authority. After the loss of a sheep, both the shepherd and his animal’s owner, the ruler’s wife, have to balance their accounts; see (37)-(39). The mark is checked (33) in order to put it on the right shepherd’s credit. If the hides remain with another person, the accounts cannot be settled (35).

The legal procedure of a shepherd proving the loss of animals by presenting its hide to its owner is well known. Unfortunately, the respective term used with animals that died from natural causes, the well-known $\text{de}_5\text{-de}_5\text{-ga} (“RI-RI-ga”), represents another lexicographical problem. Usually interpreters have relied on the Akkadian equivalent of $\text{udu de}_5\text{-de}_5\text{-ga}$, $\text{miqittu} “\text{downfall, death (among animals)}”; see (16). Now, as $\text{de}_5\text{-g}$ does not mean “to fall” in Sumerian, $\text{miqittu}$ can hardly represent a “literal” translation, but it seems to capture the “idea” of $\text{udu de}_5\text{-de}_5\text{-ga}$. The basic meaning of $\text{de}_5\text{-g}$ is “to collect, gather, pick up” (Akkadian $\text{laqtitu}$), $\text{udu de}_5\text{-de}_5\text{-ga}$ are thus “collected sheep,” i.e., the animals’ corpses collected in the steppe. Therefore, the Sumerian idiom adopts the shepherd’s point of view; the Akkadian takes the animal’s side. Probably, this specific context also led to the translation $\text{de}_5 = \text{maqtitu}$ (PAa 130:1, Ea II 296f., Aa II/7 ii 3’):

Apparently, na de₅-g is attested only once with animals after the Old Sumerian period, namely in a series of Old Babylonian administrative texts about animal fodder from Nippur. gud na de₅-ga is/are listed only once, on three successive days (21st to 23rd day of ki-3 iti sig₄-a); according to the amount of fodder, one or two animals are concerned. The amount of fodder attributed (2 seah of grain) to gud na de₅-ga corresponds to the fodder of the gud ḫu-ṇu “weak ox(en)” the days before, which are missing on these three days.⁴⁷ J.F. Robertson, therefore, explains gud na de₅-ga as “diseased bull,” although he would not translate it in this way (p. 261 n. 2).

If the common meaning “to clear” of na de₅-g is applied, gud na de₅-ga can be interpreted as “oxen, cleared away/out; separated, selected.” This makes perfect sense also in the Old Sumerian texts and agrees with the grammatical construction. The specific use of the verb is slightly different: in Old Babylonian Nippur the diseased animals are separated from the herds, in Old Sumerian Girsu the fallen ones. na de₅-g seems generally to be replaced by ṣu gid₂, interpreted as “selection,”⁴⁸ in later Sumerian administrative texts, and this explains its restriction to the Early Dynastic texts from Girsu.

na de₅ with Objects of Wood: “to Cut Out”

In the wood texts, na de₅-g apparently describes the action to be performed, so that the ready wood can be stored and brought away from the forest. The lists of wood and tools usually “begin with larger pieces of ‘timber’ […] ; then come things like plough parts, waggon parts, parts of furniture, etc.; and finally […] pieces of firewood.”⁴⁹ A meaning “to fell” is difficult to apply, since we are not dealing with just felled trees and bushes, but with the products, as the combination of tools and wood pieces proves. The Old Sumerian texts refer to the same work as that of the foresters of Ur III Umma, which “entailed primarily felling trees and turning them into timber and simple tools.”⁵⁰ Here, the “cut (out), prepared wood” is called na de₅-g thus includes both the cutting of trees, bushes, and branches and the preparation of timber and simple tools.

⁴⁷ J.F. Robertson, Redistributive Economies in Ancient Mesopotamian Society: A Case Study from Isin-Larsa Period Nippur (Ph. D. Diss., 1981): 99f., see especially the table on p. 114; the texts were described by F.R. Kraus, ZA 53 (1959): 140–41, who noted that gud na de₅-ga cannot mean “krepiertes Tier.”

The specific use of the common meaning “to clear” thus can be understood as “to cut out,” i.e., to “clear” the branches or trunks out of the bushes and trees (see esp. (52)), to “clear” timber or implements of branches and leaves, to cut the respective object out of the wood.

An Etymology for na de₅-g “to Clear, Clarify”?

It is more difficult to detect an etymology of na de₅-g, as it is the case with other compound verbs such as en₃ tar “to investigate”; ga₂-la dag “to cease (doing sth.),” gal₂ taka₄ “to open,” mu₃ tum₂ “to stop, to cease,” ne su-ub “to kiss,” sa ge₄ “to prepare,” u₂-gu de₂ “to lose,” u₃ ku(₄) “to sleep.”

If na de₅-g can be derived from known Sumerian words, de₅-g might well be “to collect,” but na remains a problem. na “stone” makes hardly any sense, so the element na of na-izi “incense,” ni₃-g “censer” might be considered. In the Early Dynastic incantations, Manfred Krebernik isolated a word na for which he proposes a meaning “ban, spell” (German “Bann”); at least a negative substance or influence seems plausible.

This leads to the following speculation: na, perhaps “smoke,” might be the same word as the Early Dynastic na, perhaps “spell,” thus referring to something that is veiling or darkening; na de₅-g would thus have originally meant “to collect” this polluting essence. Such an original meaning might long have been lost in the compound. The speculative character of such an etymology can only be outlined.

Conclusion

In this investigation I have argued that the basic meaning of the Sumerian compound verb na de₅-g is “to clear, to clarify”; this clearing is achieved by removal and by putting the elements in order. Despite the English translation or German "klären, (aus)lichten," the aspects of "light" and "brilliance" do not apply. The specific meanings can be derived from the basic meaning:

THE SUMERIAN VERB na de₅(-g)

(a) "to clarify, enlighten, explain" something unknown, unclear to a person by removing doubts and ignorance;
(b) "to clarify, consecrate, purify" especially cultic substances or installations, to put them in order so that their clarified essence can emerge;
(c) "to clear away/out, to separate" animals from the herds, especially dead animals;
(d) "to clear out, to cut out" timber or wooden implements from the bushes and trees.

Meanings (c) and (d) are practically restricted to Old Sumerian texts from Girsu, and I have noted the expressions replacing na de₅ in Ur III texts. na de₅-g is still quite prominent in Gudea, but it survived only in its specific meanings (a) and (b), almost exclusively in literary contexts and especially in its non-finite nominal forms na de₅ and na de₅-ga.
